Since the adjournment of the Legislature I have subject of two abunive articles in the OV and a journment of the unit of the "Chitsens' association." The articles did not countil my arrival in town to grossly personal that the grossly personal that the selieve anybody to know. I will here declare that I am not seeking and do not desire any office or place whatever.

I am also charged with "complicity" in the "City Chamberlain swindle." Now, what are the facts in this case? In amendment to the city tax levy was proposed to the committee (not by me), but the committee reported the brill without any amendment touching that slice. While the levy was under consideration in the Founts, late in the ovening, and while the friends of relorate the lit without any amendment touching that slice. While the levy was under consideration in the Founts, late in the ovening, and while the friends of relorated on the tax levy, the democrate, by the fact that everal republican Semitors were absent, were soled with the determination to force the bill to a third readar when the fact in the everal republican Semitors were absent, were soled with the determination to force the bill to a third readar when the fact that the session until this arrows a sained, and with that design alone or two-efforts to have the Senate—then in Committee of the Factor of the Senate and corpor progress, each of which was voted levy. I determined to protract the session until this arrows as sained, and with that design alone I sok the readiest means at hand, and offered the mendment touching the City Chamberlain which I had sleped to deiest in the standing committee, knowing it ould elicit debate. This worked exactly as I expected, did the Semate adjourned. The next day I withdraw the mendment. An amendment touching the City Chamberlain was adopted, and he have as suspicious this amendment, and finally offered as a substitute the lowing, drafted by myself, in presence of both comittees, and it was adopted, and is now the law:—

The Chamberlain of the city of New York is hereby authored, in all cases where he may now by any existing law be open cent and no one per cent, by received on sound of the State.

This amendment has been misprinted or misrepresented thing in this clause contained shall affect any ing and shall not apply to moneys paid or received on its of the State. Its amendment has been misprinted or misrepresented prious journais in this respect:—That the one-eighth obe 'in lieu of the one per cent to which he is now set by law." It is alleged, and perhaps justly, that sasuned him to be entitled to one per cent, and even red it. But mark the difference in my amendment, a ways "where he may now by any existing law," This assumes nothing, declares nothing, legalizes ag. It leaves Mr. Develin just where we found him, by the reduction. If the law before entitled him to ng, he is now to have the whole of that, and if it led him to anything as fees, he is to have one-h of that.

striction it can be tortured into a benefit to Mr. Develin at the expense of the taxpayers, or whether it is not an absolute outright reduction of seven-eighths of his legal fees.

The slander as to my personal relations with Mr. Develin and have never and the property of the scope of the above amendment; but it will further say, to silence all early that I have never met Mr. Bevelin, and have never had any communication from or with him, or any friend or agent of his acting as such, in relation to the matter of his fees.

As the city tax levy has incidentally been referred to, I may further be permitted to say, in relation to it, that it was received at a very late period in the session. The Committee on Municipal Affairs in the Senate, of which I was chisfman, took the bill into consideration immediately after it was referred to them, and hold three or four public seasions, each of several hours' duration. At these sessions various parties app, ared to present their statements or claims before the committee, and the opportunity was offered to any persons who chose to be present themselves. Having thus heard all who had any communication to make, the committee and as series of private sessions, occupying three or four hours each day, when no persons were admitted unless summoned by the committee. At these meetings each subdivision of the levy was carefully considered, in connection with the statements or claims which had been laid before the committee at the public sessions. The result of these deliberations may be found in the bill as reported to the Senate and printed for its files. This bill shows a considerable deduction on many of the tems called for by the departments and recommended by the Common Council. I thought then, and still think, that the majority of the committee was to strike out the provision for paying the sanders are such as a special order by the Senate, and passed that body with only three or four amendments, one of these, adding largely to the confined the bill by a vote of the committee sept Senator Smith) at once considered the Assembly amendments, and reported to the Senate recommending concurrence in a few of the amendments, and that a conference committee be appointed by each Bouse upon the remaining points of difference. Against my publicly expressed wish I was placed upon the committee on the part of the Senate, together with Senators Shafer and Lambier, and Immediately met a similar committee of &ve members from the Assembly.

The matters in regard to which the houses disagreed were considered servatins, and upon most of them the Assembly Committee receded; but upon others they were perthactous, and long discussions ensued, resulting in some instances in compromise, and in others the Senate Committee were compelled to receds.

The result of this conference was to reduce the levy more than a quarter of a million of dollars below the sum fixed by the bill as it passed the Assembly.

But why did the Senate, and had as much right to insist upon its views as the Senate had. Was there no alternative? Yes: the two houses could have disagreed, thus destroying the bill; and I had been admonished for days previously, by the friends of reform, that this was the very result that the enemies of reform were aiming at. I was advised that the failure of any tax levy would cost the elity a million of dollars. That the finances of the city would be administered upon the credit of the city, without any restriction. That under the plea of "necessity" all restraints would be set aside, and a carnival of reck-less plundering be enjoyed. Certainly I had no desire to become in any degree responsible for such a condition of things. The action of conference committees can never be entirely satisfactory. Where two parties have adopted fixed views, and then find themselves where the pressure of legislative rules or requirements compels each to abondon something that he believes to be wrong, there must be mutual dissatisfaction. Every member of the Senate and Assembly committees of conference signed the joint repor

Done to death by slanderous tongues.

In here leaving this subject, I may justly use the language of an English statesman of the last century: "I am not in the least surprised, nor in the least angry, at this view of things, I have read the book of life for a long time, and I have read other books a little. Nothing has happened to me but what has happened to men much better than I, and in times and in nations full as good as the age and country we live in. To say that I am no way sourcerned would be neither decent nor true." Under great provocation I have striven to command my temper, and even to be patient.

'Tis all men's office to speak patience; But no man's virtue, nor sufficiency, To be so moral, when he shall endure The like himself.

The like himself.

And now, oh, Moneybagai suffer me one word of advice. Cease calling upon Hercules, and help yourselves. Go you to the Common Council and Legislature. Serew By your courage and become Aldermen and Senators, even if you do thereby make of yourselves largets at which every fool may fire his poppen. You are rich? Yery well. If you are also honerable and generous and frank the people will like you none the less for being fresh, the people will like you none the less for being fresh. You call all politicians knaves; but think how small a proportion of all the people are politicians! The people will trust you if you are fit to be trusted. But if you are not only rich, but avaricious, selfish, extortionate landlords, relentless creditors, seurious lenders, then fon! set the people to trust you. To such they have an instinctive aversion. Do not be alarmed by the expedience of some mambers of the present Senate. It is that two of them have been hanged in effigy; three there have been praised in your Oldies, and another been posted in his district; yet all these gentiemen still iree, and are none the less respected and beloved by their constituents.

Strong efforts have been made to day by combinations to sustain it; otherwise it would have sympathized more actively with the decline of gold. Much of the "short" interest recently outstanding has been covered, and should anything occur to derange the money market stocks would incur the risk of a heavy decline. Even as it is the number of outside buyers is not sufficient to make matters easy for the bull operators, who, having run prices up, now find themselves saddled with the stocks. The main argument of the bears is the prospect of a large de-crease of earnings by reason of produce being diverted from the railways to water channels, without any comfrom the railways to water channels, without any com-pensating reduction of working expenses. Thus unfa-vorable reports are expected in the future. It must, however, be remembered that Wall street operations are influenced by the market, and that, conse-quently, allowances are to be made for sinis-ter motives. Nevertheless the indications are in favor of lower prices, and those who are speculating for a rise may find during the month that they have built a house upon the sand. The exthat they have built a house upon the sand. The extreme abundance of money will, however, meanwhile enable the buils to run the market up, if they feel so disposed. The rise of Eric from 44, at the beginning of April, to the price at which it is now selling was no more warranted by facts than its rise to 120 last spring. The one price was too low and the other too high; and the panie. The opening price was 136, followed by a rapid decline to 131%, after which it reacted to 132%, and then receded to 130% a %, at which it stood at balf-past five. The operators in gold are pushing the premium down unduly, and a reaction is therefore inevitable. If the financial condition of the country were better appreciated the price of gold to-day would be much higher; but with us it never rains but it would be much higher; but with us it never rains but it pours. Just now there is no considerable demand for export and customs duties to check the decline, and therefore the bears can hammer with impunity. They may hammer it to 120 on the same principle. It is true the political and financial prospects of the nation have improved; but it is still nonsense for any one to suppose that gold will remain permanently at the low premium which unthinking persons at pretent suppose, and it may be safely said that the market price of gold is no criterion of its real value. We have printed the annexed tabular statement already, but we repeat it in order to show that during the third and fourth years following the concluduring the third and fourth years following the conclusion of the Napoleonic wars specio ruled at a higher premium in England than in the first and second years subsequent to the peace. The mint price of gold was £3 17s. 10½d. per ounce, but its market price averaged £4 1s. 6d. and £4 1s. 0d. respectively in the years 1818 and

The following resolution was adopted at the regular session of the Chamber of Commerce to-day:—

Resolved, That this Chamber make direct appeal to the proper authorities, asking that, at the earliest moment consistent with the public interest, all restrictions upon trade with the restored sections of the rebellious States be removed; that commerce in all things not contraband of war be made free to all citizens, and all legitimate branches of industry be encouraged.

This may be said to fairly represent the commercial spirit of the loyal States and a large portion of those recently in rebellion. Now that the war is practically ended, at least east of the Mississippi, the sentiment of the entire country is in favor of the speedy resumption of commerce between the two sections, and it is the duty of the administration to lose no time in comenting the bond of commercial union by the removal of vexatious restrictions, which, however necessary they may have been considered in time of war, can hardly be deemed necessary to the public safety now. The policy of confiscation ought to be abandoned, unless in the case of property owned by the rebel government, and a free interchange of commodities inaugurated. The area of the South is too great to allow of the successful enforcement of a confiscation decree, unless with regard to land; and the personal property there is probably much less than is generally supposed.

We published a few days ago an estimate of the accu mulation of cotton, by one who has entered into close calculations; but his figures will in all likelihood prove exaggerated, and instead of 2,604,000 bales or more being stored and hidden away in the rebel States, considerably less than two millions of bales will be discovered according to present appearances.

Owners of real property will feel interested in the accompanying decision under the Internal Revenue act:—

TREASCRY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
WASHINGTON, April 28, 1865.
Sim—Your inquiries of April 19 and 22 in regard to deduction for taxes are received.
I reply, that all income taxes paid in 1864 are proper deductions from income of that year.
Assessments made by municipal corporations for the laying out or grading of streets, the construction of walks, sewers, &c., may be deducted from income where they are laid upon all taxpayers within the corporation; but if they are laid only upon the owners of property supposed to be increased in value by the improvement, no deduction can be allowed. All town and county taxes, including taxes assessed for raising soldiers, may be deducted. Very respectfully.

E. A. ROLLINS, Deputy Commissioner.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

PETERSHERO, VA., April 30, 1865,

SIR—Through absence from New York my attention has only this morning been called to a communication in your issue of the 28th Inst., signed John H. Archer, contradicting the notice of marriage published in the HERALD of the 28d inst., between John H. Archer and S. Kate Overton. As such a ceremony did take place at the time stated between the undersigned and Miss S. Kate Overton, I can only conclude that the contradiction emamated from some person bearing the same name as myself, and who evidently labors under the delusion that he is the only John H. Archer in Christendom. By giving this letter the same publicity through your valueble columns as that afforded my unknown namesake you will greatly oblige yours, respectfully.

JOHN HENRY ARCHER.
